

Dear Sirs:

The FCC's jettisoning the Fairness Doctrine, controversial as it was, has landed us in a situation where the Sinclair Broadcast Group can air a spurious program like "Stolen Honor" within two weeks of a hotly contested election and only be legally obligated to offer "equal air time" to George W. Bush.

It is sad to see that the U.S. is no better off than Italy when the media is protected by law to promote the specific political agendas of the moguls who run them with no regard for accuracy, fairness, and improved public information. As my representatives, I implore you to speak out against this particular situation and the general trend of this government to deregulate industries which have a proven record of not being able to govern themselves for the benefit of the public. Including, but not limited to savings and loan organizations, energy brokers, accounting firms, utilities, and the media.

Respectfully,

Jung Soo Kim
